

Department of Emergency Medicine

Program Overview

The University of Tennessee College of Medicine Chattanooga is proud to be the home of the University of Tennessee's first Emergency Medicine Residency Program. Our Program is approved as a three-year residency beginning at the PGY-1 level with seven residents at each level.

All PGY-1 year residents spend the month of July in the Emergency Department. A special introductory lecture series and simulation skills sessions are provided during this month. The remainder of experience in the PGY-1 year provides residents with broad exposure to a variety of medical disciplines. Residents develop a strong clinical background in critical care, anesthesiology, trauma surgery, ultrasound and obstetrics. The PGY-2 and PGY-3 years provide residents with increasing clinical responsibility during blocks of both adult and pediatric emergency medicine. Didactic conferences are held weekly during protected time for both residents and faculty. Journal clubs are also conducted on a monthly basis.

All required rotations are performed at Erlanger Health System, a system that includes the main, downtown adult hospital – Erlanger Baroness Campus -- and the pediatric hospital - Children's Hospital at Erlanger. Both are housed within the same medical center complex. Erlanger is a recognized leader in healthcare and is a tertiary care facility for a region involving portions of five states. The Erlanger Health System has a 551 bed capacity, (licensed for 813 beds), including 122 adult and pediatric critical care beds. The Erlanger Health System was recently noted to be the 8th busiest emergency care network in the US by Beckers Hospital Review, with over 150K visits per year.

Applications

Chair: Sudave Mendiratta, MD, FACEP

Program Director: W. Doug Gregorie, MD, FACEP

Residency Coordinator: Velvet Green

Our program participates in the National Resident Matching Program (NRMP) so all applicants must register with the Match. In addition, applicants must submit applications via the AAMC's Electronic Residency Application Service (ERAS). A complete application for Emergency Medicine should include:

- Completed ERAS application form
- Personal Statement
- Curriculum Vitae (CV)
- Official transcript from your medical school
- Two letters of recommendation – at least one should be a CORD Standard Letter of Evaluation (SLOE – formerly SLOR) completed by an Emergency Medicine Faculty (see the CORDEM.org website for details)
- USMLE Step 1 passing score (USMLE Step 2 if available)

Once an applicant has completed the application packet in ERAS and submitted it to our program, our Selection Committee will review the application. Interviews will be offered for the most qualified applicants. Interviews will be extended by invitation only. We hope to see you in Chattanooga!
